

A giant fell this week.

Gordon MacNab was a friend, a mentor, and consummate professional.

He is deeply and profoundly missed by his partners, staff, colleagues, friends, clients, family, and all who knew him.

Very few lawyers are so devoted to the law that they practice it for more than fifty years. Being trusted counsel was Gordon to his core. And he was very good at it.

Gordon was the steady hand for those who sought him out. An excellent listener, a thoughtful tactician, and contemplative planner, he approached all matters with the cool head of the long game. Never sharp, never rude, he focused on resolving matters professionally and well, to the benefit of his clients. Always, he added a dash of humour and a twinkle in his eye.

We will miss his guidance, knowledge, and grace. Most of all, we will miss his laugh and the burst of positive energy that happened every time he walked through the door.

We wish him fair winds and following seas.
