The IBA's 50:50 by 2030 Project aims to explore the lack of gender parity across all levels of the legal profession, with a focus on those in senior positions. Phase 2 of the project comprises a global survey seeking views from women lawyers, as well as those who have recently left the profession, about a variety of topics, including:

- their experience as lawyers in the profession;
- initiatives available and their impact;
- barriers to practice;
- reasons for staying or leaving the profession;
- areas or sectors of practice;
- career satisfaction; and
- the impact of family or other caring responsibilities on their careers.

Responses will be collected anonymously. Every response is valuable and will help us to better understand the experiences of women working in the profession worldwide. For more information about the Project please go to www.ibanet.org/gender-equality-in-the-legal-profession.
